

Tour 5 - Seasonal Pleasures and Small Town Treasures

In autumn, conditions are perfect in Plumas County for touring quaint historic communities dotted with “mom and pop” shops, restaurants and small museums. View spectacular fall foliage, enjoy birding at picturesque lakes, streams and valleys, play a round of golf at one of several beautiful courses, and visit a private working ranch. At this scenic time of year there are fewer vacationers, making Plumas County the ideal spot for a peaceful and memorable getaway.

Plumas County is located in northeastern California, where the Sierra Nevada and Cascade mountain ranges meet. It boasts more than 100 lakes, 1,000 miles of streams and over a million acres of forestland. With only eight people per square mile, this rural four seasons mountain retreat offers beauty, solitude, clean air, and an unhurried pace. Off the beaten path, it’s not crowded with tourists. You’ll find plenty of attractions and things to do in this undiscovered part of the state, with year-round events, scenic drives and even a state and national park.

A peaceful stay in the tiny village of Graeagle combines shopping and fine dining with birding, historic buildings, a ranch visit, trains, fall foliage and tales from the Gold Rush.
